Socioeconomic and climate challenges: Framing inequalities and resilience

We are pleased to announce the call for submissions for our upcoming PhD Conference, to be held at the University of Rome “La Sapienza” on September 2nd and 3rd, 2024. This year's conference will focus on addressing and framing the socioeconomic and climate challenges that we, as scholars and academics, face. Our second PhD conference aims to foster a space for dialogue among PhD students, complemented by sessions with our keynote speaker and discussants. This year, the conference will feature a total of 6 tracks:

- (1) Sustainable Finance: ESG, Climate, and Transition risks
- (2) Fostering Development in light of Economic Inequalities
- (3) Social Inequalities: diversity and inclusion for a resilient society
- (4) Computational Social Sciences
- (5) Territorial Disparities: Inner and Outer, Urban and Rural
- (6) Intersectional and Intergenerational Inequalities

To participate, we invite you to compile the following Google Form, and to submit a paper or an abstract - the latter, no longer than 2 A4 Word pages in Times New Roman, 11 or equivalent. This year we offer the chance to 1st year PhD and master's student to present, on the same tracks above, a poster. It is for us the opportunity to create a space for everyone, in earlier or later stage of research, to discuss and talks with their own peers about their own works.

Important dates:
